The maritime industry has always been a key economic sector in all coastal European regions, but the shipbuilding industry in Europe is facing fierce competition. To combat these challenges, the Adriatic-Ionian region can offer green alternatives to already existing technologies, as well as develop new applications and business opportunities that will enhance the development of a strong niche industry. Through showcasing innovation-based green technologies in shipbuilding and shipment, we will connect policy makers, business, and academia to promote these solutions in Slovenia and beyond.
